An Englishman in America.

SOME OF HIS IMPRESSIONS—WHAT HE SAW IN THE WEST.

From a volume written by W. F. Rae, attached to the editorial corps of the London News, who visited this country in 1870, and made a western tour to San Francisco, we take the following extracts:

TROUT FISHING IN WYOMING.

"Sherman station, the highest point on the Pacific Railway, is in the Territory of Wyoming, the youngest among the Territories of the United States. Some writers strongly advise the traveler to make a halt at Sherman station. The inducements held out to him are mountain scenery, invigorating air, fishing and hunting. A sojourn among the peaks of the Rocky Mountains has the attraction of novelty to recommend it. Life there must be in every sense of the word, a new sensation. But some sensations are undesirable, notwithstanding their undoubted freshness. That splendid trout swarm in the streams near Sherman admits of no dispute. Yet the disciple of Isaak Walton should not be tempted to indulge rashly in his harmless and charming sport as it is delightful to hook large fish, but it is less agreeable to be pierced through by arrows. Now, the latter contingency is among the probabilities which must be taken into consideration. A few weeks prior to my journey, one of the conductors of the train by which I traveled, learned by practical experience that fishing among the Rocky Mountains has palpable and painful drawbacks. Having taken a few days holiday, he went forth, fishing rod in hand, to amuse himself. While whipping the stream, in the innocence of his heart, he was startled to find himself made the target for arrows shot by wild Indians. He sought safety in flight, and recovered from his wounds to the surprise of much as to the gratification of his friends. His story did not render me desirous of sharing his fate. The trout-fisher might employ his leisure to greater advantage elsewhere than in the Territory of Wyoming."

GAMBLING.

"After passing Corinne, around which the country is fertile and well cultivated, the line runs through a barren tract, skirts the shore of the Great Salt Lake, and ascends the side of Promontory Mountain. The gradients here are very steep, and the cuttings in the rock must have been made with much expenditure of toil and money. Two trestle bridges are crossed, a sharp curve is rounded, and the station of Promontory is reached. This is the western terminus of the Union Pacific, and the eastern terminus of the Central Pacific Railway. The town is built partly of canvas and partly of wood, and has but one street. The signs are hardly in keeping with the structures to which they are attached. Over a shanty is painted, in large letters, 'Pacific Hotel,' and over a tent, 'Club House.' One of the wooden dwellings attracts notice on account of the neatly arranged muslin curtains within the window. Unlike the others, it has no sign board to indicate its purpose, but a glance through the open door satisfies the curiosity of the passer-by. He sees two or three smiling females ready to extend welcome to whoever will enter in. This is characteristic of all these rude settlements in the wild Western country. In a canvas town, the abode of women with few scruples to overcome, and no characters to lose, is a distinguishable, and as much a thing of course, as the gambling hell and the drinking saloon. Of drinking saloons there are many at Promontory, but there is only one gambling hell, as far as I could learn. This one is quite enough for the place. In its way, the hell is unique. The object of its keepers is to entice the passengers halting here to try their luck. While this view, agents are sent to the neighboring stations, where they take their places in the cars, and enter into conversation with the occupants. Of course, as soon as the train stops at Promontory, these agents, lead the way to the gaming-table. Nor have they far to go. It is in the open air, within a few yards of the line. The game played is three-card monte. It is as simple as thimble-rig. Three cards are laid out in line with their faces downward. Let it be supposed that these are a jack, a king and a queen, the denomination of the card making no difference—the dealer will then challenge any one to point out one of them, say the jack. A stake of a twenty-dollar gold-piece depends on the event. In front of the card-dealer is a pile of these gold pieces. He addresses the lookers-on as follows: 'Gentlemen, you have your eyes against my hand. You see how I place the cards, moving the three backward and forward, and then laying them in a row. Now, I will bet any one of you that he does not point out the jack. If he does so at the first chance he wins his money, if he fails, he loses it.' One of the by-standers inquires if he will bet without touching the cards, to which the reply is, 'Certainly, sir, I will bet anything from twenty to one hundred dollars that you do not point out the jack.' The speaker steps forward eagerly and excitedly, places a twenty-dollar gold piece on the table, and points to a card which, when reversed, is seen to be the right one. He gets his twenty dollars, which he clutches, and then makes off rapidly, as if surprised and delighted at his good fortune, carrying off, also, the winning card in the excitement of the moment. The card-dealer calls upon him to return the 'ticket,' adding 'By golly, sir, you have beaten me this time, but you are as welcome to the money as if you had worked hard for it.' This is repeated several times, the keeper of the table invariably losing. Indeed, the game seems absurdly easy, as there is always a small black speck on the back of the winning card, and every on-looker thinks it a certainty to point out this card. At last, after the dealer had lost repeatedly, a man came out of the tent, behind the table saying, 'Come now, partner, you had better stop; this won't do.' To which he replies, 'By golly, I will play till I lose every cent I have in the world. I must win nine times out of ten, and I am ready to bet any gentleman one hundred dollars that he does not point out the right card this time.' The truth is, the men who had staked and won were what we call confederates, and what are here called 'cappers.' They certainly played their parts exceedingly well, and would have imposed on any other set of spectators than one composed of old Californians, who are too knowing birds to be caught by the chaff of card sharpers. They are well acquainted with the trick of the game. I saw a poor German baker, destitute of experience, and endowed with but little sense, dispossessed in a few minutes of all that he had in his pockets. The trick consists in being able to deceive the spectator by shifting the small black speck on the back of the cards in such a way as to make him point to the wrong one. When the betting is real, the 'bank' never loses."

AMERICAN WOMEN.

From points about which travelers differ, it is a pleasure to turn to one about which there has been, and must be, perfect unanimity. The beauty of the women is without the pale of controversy. It cannot be likened to the beauty for which English girls are deservedly and universally admired, for which Italian maidens have been immortalized on canvass or in verse; for which the sprightly damsels of France and the coquettish ladies of Spain have won applause, and by means of which they have won conquests. If I were to select a particular locality in the United States, I might truthfully compare the type of beauty predominant there to that in a particular country in the old world. But America is a world in itself. Within the bounds of the Republic of the West are all climates which give diversity to Europe, from Rome to Copenhagen, and from London to Madrid. Where climates vary, female faces vary also. In New England may be seen those delicately chiseled features and transparent complexions which in Europe are characteristic of the fascinating blondes of the North. In the Southern States the imperious and indolent Spanish ... have been reproduced at the distance of many thousand miles from Andalusia and Castile. Let the traveler cross the continent till the Pacific slope is reached, and there the soft and delicate beauty of Italy, combined with an intelligence wholly American and a physique wholly English, delights and surprises him. Nor are good looks the sole dower of American girls. They are, like the French, like the English, ... acuteness with which they argue. They are passionately fond of the frivolities of existence, yet they follow with interest the course of the graver topics of the day. On political questions they are ready to take sides, and they discuss the issues involved in a controversy with tact and understanding. Their patriotism is not a profession, but a passion. The intensity of their devotion to their country imparted superhuman vigor to the struggle when North and South faced each other in battle array. The women of the South were the soul of the Confederacy. The women of the North saved the Union. If the women of America were more kindly disposed toward England, the relations between the two countries at this moment would be more cordial and more secure."

The Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate—Mr. Sumner, the President and the Republican Party.

New York Herald.

The quarrel between President Grant and Senator Sumner has been made a test question in the Senate itself of party fidelity to the administration. The General demands the removal of Mr. Sumner from the chairmanship of the important Committee on Foreign Relations, and the Republican majority of the Senate are required to act upon this question. The requisition places them in a delicate and dangerous dilemma. Mr. Sumner has been at the head of this committee for twelve years. As a scholar, and as an American statesman, and as an advanced radical Republican, he has given great satisfaction to his party in this responsible position. In his famous speech in opposition to the Reverdy Johnson treaty on the Alabama claims, he gave great satisfaction to the American people; but he has never given much satisfaction to General Grant from the appointment of his first Cabinet down to this day. Mr. Sumner, in fact, in his stronghold in the Senate, has stood somewhat in the position of master over the administration, and General Grant has been made so to understand it. For the sake of peace he quietly submitted to this state of things, until his pet measure, the treaty for the annexation of the republic of Dominica, as the first step to the acquisition of the whole of the splendid island of St. Domingo, was defeated through the implacable opposition of Mr. Sumner, as chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

This was that last package which breaks the camel's back. Nor can the result be wondered at, in, with Mr. Sumner's denunciations of this annexation scheme, we recall his vindictive arraignment of the President himself as the head of a corrupt speculative coalition. At any rate, from that day of the Senator's declaration of war the President resolved that it should be war until one or the other of the belligerents should bite the dust. So it is that General Grant has demanded the displacement of Mr. Sumner as the head of the Foreign Relations Committee in the reappointment of the Senate committees for the new Congress. And, in justification of this demand, it may be said that the chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, from his necessary confidential official relations with the President, ought to be a recognized friend, and not a declared enemy of the President. The Senate chairman in question may be considered as de facto a member of the Cabinet, as the Secretary of State for the Senate, on foreign affairs. Every foreign appointment and every treaty from the President is first referred to this Senate committee, and the report of its chairman on the nomination or the treaty is, as the rule, accepted as the judgment of the Senate.

Hence the influence of Mr. Sumner in the rejection of the St. Domingo annexation treaty—the ratification requiring a two-thirds vote. Hence the adoption, by General Grant, of the Texas annexation plan, in connection with this St. Domingo investigation expedition. Again, it may be a matter of the highest importance to the President to have a friend at the head of this Senate committee, in view of the treaties expected from the Joint High Commission, and in view of a treaty in reference to the Darien Canal, and in view of other treaties in other quarters, upon all of which he will desire, occasionally, to confer confidentially with the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. This confidential interchange of opinions between the President and the Senate through its official representative is now arrested; and here is the difficulty of which the President very naturally, and properly, too, desires to be relieved. As the recognized head and candidate of the Republican party for the Presidential succession, and as the head of the Executive Department of the Government, he makes this request, and the Republican Special Committee of the Senate and the party caucus on the subject have, as it appears, decided upon the question in the President's favor and against Mr. Sumner.

The special Senate committee on the reappointment of its regular committees, and the Senate caucus, we are informed, have agreed upon General Cameron as the man for chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, and as a peace offering to Mr. Sumner, they have offered him the head of a new committee on elections, which he has declined. General Cameron himself appears willing, but nothing, it appears, will satisfy Mr. Sumner but a defeat of the President. The proper course, on the part of the Senator, is resolving upon war with the President, would have been to resign his position on the foreign committee in order that the Senate, through its regular channel, might still be free to communicate with the President on international affairs. Waiving to adopt the alternative Mr. Sumner will have no right to complain, a party, man if he is supplanted in the place which he has so long filled, and with such credit to himself, to the Senate and the country. It must be remembered, even great men are compelled, often to yield the wall when great measures are at stake. The Senate, however, in open session, has still to act on this proposed removal of Mr. Sumner, and it is possible that the Democrats, from their approval of his course on San Domingo, may exert themselves for him and carry the balance of power in his favor.

In any event, this quarrel between General Grant and the great Senatorial radical thunderer from Massachusetts means mischief to the Republican party. The effects may be felt in the approaching elections in Hampshire and Connecticut; for, we see, there are many Republicans in the New England States who hold Senator Sumner as the Magnus Apollo of their party, and General Grant as a young apprentice, who needs still considerable schooling in it, to become a genuine radical. When Senator Douglas quarrelled with President Buchanan, a Buchanan with Douglas, it was the final not only of Douglas and of Buchanan, but of the Democratic party. When Horace Greeley broke up the political firm of Seward, Weed & Greeley, at Chicago in 1860, he demolished Seward; but ... in the New York Republican camp, as to result in 1869 and 1870, in turning over this State ... with the hands of Tammany Hall ... for 1872? Millard Fillmore, ... a very respectable President, was never, ...

DANCING ASSEMBLY.—This evening there will be another assembly of Prof C Ballou's dancing academy, at the usual hour. A PRESENTATION.—Last Wednesday night, at the closing dance of his academy at Union, Prof. C Ballou was agreeably surprised by a presentation from his class of a handsome gold-headed cane. PERSONAL.—Johnny Steele, the ex-millionaire, is now baggage agent at Rouseville for the O. C. & A. R. R.

Mr. Laurence Oliphant, who lately obtained notoriety in connection with an establishment of Socialists on the shore of Lake Erie, seceded from that association some time since, and has lately been corresponding with the London Times from Lyons and Marseilles.

PROWLERS.—Our citizens will be glad to learn that our police are keeping a careful watch over suspicious characters. At three o'clock on Sunday morning policeman M Graw arrested Alex. Johnson, Alex. McCormick and Pat. O'Neil, on Spruce street, for prowling about the streets, and refusing to give an account of themselves. Justice Strouse fined them five dollars each with costs and warned them.

RAILROAD ACCIDENTS.—The express train that left Cleveland Saturday morning via A. & G. W. Railway, broke through the bridge at Saegertown and was detained several hours. No one was hurt, as we learn. A defective rail was the cause.

The train from Union met with an accident at Tryonville Saturday afternoon, by getting an overloaded freight car off the track. The passengers came down on the evening express of the Oil Creek Railroad. The train on the Union Railroad got in at nine o'clock.

THE SPAULDING BELL RINGERS.—This troupe performed last Saturday night before a moderately large audience, at the Parshall Opera House. Miss Georgie Dean Spaulding, both on the harp, and with the bells, proved herself to be a musical artiste very much superior to the ordinary travelling talent of the country. She delighted the audience with familiar airs, and also more intricate pieces which betokened severe training and study. Mr. Harry Eades in his comical rendition in a variety of characters, kept the house in a roar of laughter. He has a peculiar talent for facial contortions, which is seldom equalled. Altogether, the audience were delighted with the evening's entertainment.

A DRUNKEN FRACAS.—Shortly after midnight on Saturday, a party of rowdies assembled on Diamond street opposite the Post Office, and commenced quarrelling among themselves. Officers Dougherty and McNaughton attempted to quell the disturbance but were immediately set upon by seven powerful men who overpowered them, and then ran away. The police sounded the alarm, which brought special Snyder to their assistance, and the three pursued the rowdies up Franklin street. Meanwhile officer McGraw who had heard the whistle came running down in the opposite direction accompanied by two of our reporters. He met the rowdies on the north side of Franklin street directly opposite the Bush House. It was but the work of a moment for him to fell two of the roughs to the ground, and seize a third. A rescue was attempted in the midst of which, the prisoner was pushed through a window. The other three officers coming up a general fight ensued, lasting about fifteen minutes, which resulted in the arrest of four of the party, and their conveyance to the lockup. Their names were John McIntyre, McGuire, Wright and White. Hear they again while being examined for weapons, set upon the officers, but were speedily overpowered, and safely secured in a cell. They were all taken before Justice Strouse yesterday morning and fined twenty dollars each and costs. Too much credit cannot be given to the police who were present, and especially officer McGraw, for their bravery, promptitude and resolution.

POST OFFICE LOCK BOXES.—Owing to the increasing demand for these boxes in the Post Office, thirty-one new boxes have lately been added, with Sargents patent locks. They are now ready for use.

Wendell Phillips.

For several years, the effort made to bring Wendell Phillips here for a public lecture has been a failure. The distinguished orator can accept but a tithe of the invitation, extended him, but the committee of the Association by dint of an early engagement entered into some six months ago has secured Mr. Phillips for their lecture course, and therefore the general desire to hear this Prince of lecturers is to be gratified.

His subject, "The Lost Arts," he has delivered a score of times for many years, but not a word of it has ever been put on paper by the orator. And he probably adds new embellishments and power to it on every occasion. Most people would prefer to hear the vetern agitator on some question of reform, but "the Lost Arts" gives fine scope for his surpassing eloquence and power of oratory. There will, of course, be a great rush to hear Mr. Phillips, and those who wish good seats should secure them at once.

Dame, Smith & Co.

During the last week Mr. F W. Ames has sold out his extensive stock of general hardware, stoves, iron, etc, in the well known brick store on Diamond street, in this city, to Mr. A. A. Dame, H. P. Smith and R. L. Kernochan, who will carry on the business under the firm name mentioned at the head of this article. In addition to the class of goods that has heretofore been kept in the store, will be added the most complete stock of all those articles that are comprised under the head of "Well Fittings." It is the intention of the firm to supply the operator with everything he needs for putting down a well except the engine, boiler and rig.

Mr. Ames came to this city soon after the first oil well was put down and has been engaged in mercantile affairs since, and it is superfluous to say that his career has been one of continual success and prosperity. But few men if any in our city have contributed so largely to its growth and been so instrumental in giving it the position it holds to day. For several years he was a member of the Council and School Board. The building of the Plank Road that has helped this city so much, was mainly brought about by his persevering advocacy and assistance. For two years he represented this county in the Legislature. It is a satisfaction to know that he is not to withdraw from business here, but merely change his base of operations. He, with some others owns two or three thousand acres of untouched timber land, near by in Warren county, upon which a steam mill was erected last year, and upon which one or two more are to be built this year. This timber land is a portion of 4,000 acres bought by Mr. Ames, Mr. W. W. Kingstead and others in 1860, and from which they have produced many million feet of lumber for this and the Pittsburgh market.

The new firm are by no means strangers either to this community or the business they now undertake. Mr. A. A. Dame was for several years one of the proprietors of a hardware store at Pioneer, during its palmy days, and afterwards a partner in the same business at Pleasantville in the well known firm of Dame, Saymour & Co. He is thoroughly conversant with the wants of the trade, as genial and pleasant a gentleman as can be found anywhere, and one of that indomitable class of workers that demand and enforce success from everything they undertake.

Of Mr. H P Smith we might say, as the man in the story did, though from far different reasons, "we cannot do justice to the occasion." Every one knows him and knows only well of him. He has been with Mr. Ames for the last five years, as much a trusted and valued counsellor in everything pertaining to the business, as manager and head clerk. Of the gentleman in the firm who modestly represents the "Co," Mr. R. L. Kernochan, we might be excused from saying anything, on the ground that we had exhausted the vocabulary of complimentary phrases in referring to his partners. Mr K is not a stranger to the business either, having been in the same trade with Mr. Dame, at Pioneer. His business mainly, for the last six years, has been that of an oil operator, and his knowledge of the wants of that class will be of particular value to the firm, as it has been gained by experience. In conclusion, we tender to the retiring proprietor and the new firm our best wishes for their prosperity.

THE NEW YORK PIPE COMPANY is the name and title of a new institution that has nearly finished laying a pipe from the Hickory oil field to Garland, a station on the Philadelphia and Erie Railroad, thirteen miles east of Corry. There are two pumping stations on the line, one at Hickory and one in the northeastern part of Southwest township. The entire line of pipe is of first quality of two-inch tubing, from the National Tube Works, Boston, represented here by Mr. Flagler. The whole charge of building the line was entrusted to Mr. A. B. Howland, civil engineer, of this city. Gibbs, Russell & Sterrett have the contract for putting up a large iron tank at Garland for the Company. The value of this line will largely depend upon the continuance of oil production at Hickory and the discovery of new oil fields between that point and Garland.

CO-PARTNERSHIP NOTICE.—We hereby give notice that Mr. Frank Ottnat has this 10th day of March, attached himself with the well-known and long established business known as Mayer's Confectionery and Ice Cream Rooms, No. 9 Diamond street.

The business will be carried on under the firm name of Mayer & Ottnat. Mr. L. Mayer will, as heretofore, superintend the business, assisted by Mr. Ottnat, and thanks his many friends and customers for the kind and liberal patronage they have bestowed on him, and hopes, by strict attention to business and fair dealing, to merit a continuance of the same for the new firm.

Mr. Frank Ottnat, who is well-known by most of our citizens, having lived amongst them for the past four years, would ask his friends and acquaintances, as well as the public at large, to bestow a liberal share of their patronage on us.
MAYER & OTTNAT.

The Soldiers Orphan School.

It is not, we suppose, well known to all of our readers, that the Soldiers Orphan School of this city is conducted, by authority of State law, on the industrial plan. Nearly all of the schools of the grade of the school of this city have farms attached, which are cultivated by the labor of the pupils to a great extent. Up to the present the school of this city had a tract which was farmed by them, but has now been restored to its owners, for division into city lots. It is proposed to secure other grounds for gardening the ensuing season. Quite a number of the pupils are engaged in learning the printing, and the shoemaking trades, working two hours a day at these occupations. Some of these are already quite handy at the case, and nearly all of the repairing of shoes is performed in this shop, under the superintendence of Mr. Ross. All the boys do their own housework, and keep the building in order. During the winter, the school have only one weekly exercise in military drill; at the other seasons, when the weather will permit, they have tactical instruction, under Captain H. F. Spencer, the Superintendent of the boys, and drill. The system followed is that known as Upton's, which now prevails at West Point, superceding Hardee's. The boys have become quite accurate in their evolutions, and expert in the manual of arms. The school numbers 103 boys, from eight to sixteen years of age, and within the last three years of when it was established here, there has been but one death, and but one epidemic, typhoid fever, and eighteen of the school were ill of that disease. This fact speaks well for the regular habits and good substantial diet of the school. There are some fifteen cases of measles in the school at present, which, however, seem to yield readily to medical treatment and good nursing. The physicians of the institution are Barr and Moody, who have been very successful in their practice. With regard to the school studies pursued, the proficiency of the scholars will compare favorably with that of the pupils in our public schools. The principal of the school is Prof. Beistle, a competent and faithful teacher. We make these prefatory remarks by way of introducing the general order issued by H. F. Spicer, commander, assigning rank, etc., of his military class for the ensuing term of six months.

PERSONAL.—Mr. W R Andrews, the New York resident buyer of William H. Andrews, arrived in town Saturday evening, direct from the great metropolis. His object in visiting us at this season is to be present at the great opening of spring dry goods and carpets, which will take place at the New York Store, 61, 63 & 65 Spring street, some day this week, due announcement of which will be published in these columns. We understand from Mr Andrews that the assortment will be very extensive, comprising a superb stock of dress ——, shawls and carpets, among which are many novelties which will only be found at the New York Store this season. Our lady readers will undoubtedly go in crowds to this opening, in order to get an idea of what there is new and desirable in the market.

MARK TWAIN'S BURLESQUE AUTOBIOGRAPHY AND FIRST ROMANCE.—This is the title of a pamphlet, of fifty pages, from that comical genius, Mark Twain. It is racy reading—just the book to drive dull care away, and make a horse laugh, if there is any laugh in him. Whoever has read "The Innocents Abroad" will want a copy of this. It is published by Shelden & Co, on tinted paper, and illustrated with cuts that tell their own story—in fact, are full of political hits.

Mr. B N. Hurd, who sold several hundred copies of "The Innocents Abroad," has the "Autobiography" also on his counters.

THE adjourned citizens' meeting to hear the report of the Committee on Charter Amendments, at the Council rooms on Saturday evening, was rather slimly attended, there being only about a score of persons present.

Mr Jesse Smith was called to the chair and Mr. H. L Hershberg appointed secretary.

After some discussion the meeting was adjourned to Wednesday evening of this week at Corinthian Hall.

CARRIED OFF A PRIZE.—The Tribune of March 3d, records the eleventh annual commencement of the New York Homeopathic Medical College. We are glad to notice that George F. Hurd, of this village, was awarded a prize for "Best thesis and records of clinical demonstration." We congratulate the successful competitor, and bid him God-speed in attaining marked excellence in his further studies, and in his profession.—Manlius (N Y) Times.

The young gentleman referred to is a brother of Mr. B. N. Hurd, of this city, and resided here a few years since. His friends in Titusville will be glad to hear of this evidence of marked success in his professional studies.

THE COMING WOMAN.—The members of the Presbyterian Church and Society, of Warren, are just now doing their best to raise money for the Memorial and Parsonage Fund. A few of the young ladies undertook to bring out a dramatic play to raise their part of the money. Several young gentlemen joined in the undertaking and "The Coming Women" was given at Roscoe Hall last Tuesday evening to a good house. We believe each lady contributor realized some $15 or $20 for the fund. The following were the "stars" of the evening:
Her Honor, Judge Wig'all ..... Miss Mary Briggs
Mr. Wigfall (a subjugated man). Mr. J. O. Parmlee
Miss Victorine Wigfall (slightly behind the age) ..... Miss Belle Waters
Mr. Thomas Carberry (a nervous bachelor just from China) ..... Mr. G. H. Noyes
Miss —— Griffin (a strong-minded orator) ..... Miss Belle McIntosh
Mrs. Badger (assessor of internal revenue) ..... Miss Alice Johnson
The acting was very creditable to all concerned. It is hard telling who did the best where all did so well. Our people often attend traveling shows with not half the merit.—Warren Mail.

Total Cost of Court House,

Including Furniture, Fencing, Grading, Flagging, Clocks and Bell $249,808 29

The following items, charged as extras by Carpenter & Matthews, and paid by the Commissioners, we report as clearly and unequivocally covered by the Articles of Agreement for finishing and furnishing the Court House:

240 feet of cast iron smoke pipe	530 00
986 feet of cold air ventilation pipe	394 40
Extra case in Prothonotary's office	275 0
Extra charge for iron bolt and hauling (was originally paid by Commissioners)	24 0

The following items we report as covered by Article of Agreement, so far as it applies to finishing the rooms in accordance with the plans and specifications of E. L. Roberts, Architect, viz:

Finishing Janitor's rooms 351 00

And we further claim that the said Carpenter & Matthews were bound to plaster all the attic rooms (except a portion over the Court room) with three coats of plaster. The extra charges for an extra chimney, and slight alterations in the rooms of the Recorder and Clerk's offices, amounting in the aggregate to $345 0 (four hundred and thirty-three dollars,) we report as extra.

We submit that it is but just to the present Board of Commissioners to say that those who were originally parties to these contracts, and who were supposed to best understand them, and on whom a share of the responsibility should rest, have passed out of office, and that we do not feel at liberty to charge these items to Messrs Beatty and Bennett, believing, as we do, that they have not intentionally, and always try to the interest of the county.

It however, a legal issue can be brought to recover from the parties who have wrongfully, as we think, imposed upon the commissioners, and obtained money which it is believed they were never by contract entitled to, we would recommend that it be done.

THE WALLACE SISTERS.—This charming and talented dramatic quartette inaugurate a season of six nights at the Parshall Opera House commencing this evening. The irresistible comedian, Villa, is still with them. The bill of entertainment for the evening will be found in another column. The box office is now open for reserved seats. An exchange says:

Throughout the entire Union the name of Wallace is familiar. In every select drawing-room where a collection of refined music is found, the name of Wallace is forward among the composers. How often have we heard and read of the beautiful and accomplished Wallace Sisters? From every exchange we read flattering testimonials of these young ladies; wherever they appear, they are greeted with crowded and delighted audiences to witness the performances of these truly incomparable artistes. It is rarely such ability comes among us, and we should eagerly avail ourselves of such opportunities to enjoy to the fullest an exquisite entertainment, such as is provided by the Wallace Sisters. These ladies, in their delineation, are fascinating, finished and faithful to nature; they are sparkling and dashing actresses; they possess pleasing faces, faultless figures and an ease and abandon truly bewitching. There are four sisters, two who have arrived at maturity, and two quite little girls, and we have no hesitation in saying that throughout the length and breadth of Uncle Sam's vast dominion their superiors are not to be found. The two eldest, Agnes and Jennie, and but fifteen and seventeen years of age. They have lovely faces, always beaming with a childish smile. Their musical voices and silvery laugh still fill the hearts of their audiences with joy and delight; they are "pets"; their hair is of a beautiful golden hue and hangs in great profusion over their necks and shoulders. Their wardrobe is something gorgeous to see. It is composed of the most rich and costly material and embroidered in the most elegant and magnificent style.

Their jewels, stage effects, appointments, properties, etc., cannot be surpassed in any metropolitan theatre in the country. Minnie and Maud, these morsels of mortality, compose one of the principal features of their entertainment. Their double clog, double songs and dances and other specialties, have won for them the title of "little gems of genius." Villa, the comedian for the Wallace Sisters, in his several specialities, is all reason tempered with justice could ask of mortal. His wardrobe has no equal on the American stage, and his burlesque acting and personation of female character is so true to nature that half go home bewildered. The support accorded these truly great artists by the members of their company are meritorious in a high degree, and the choruses are precise and effective.

THIS week's number of Harper's Weekly has a biographical sketch of Tom Moore, the author of Irish melodies and one of the sweetest poets of the affections that ever lived. The narrative is illustrated with a medallion likeness of the bard, his humble birthplace, his cottage home, where his last years were spent, and his grave.

Every Saturday has Ralph Keeler's Pittsburgh papers and sketches of the iron city by his artist companion, and a fine portrait and sketch of Senator Trumbull, the best debater in Congress.

Hearth and Home is full of rural hints for the season and has as good a summary of the news of the week as any other paper.

All at Howe's.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

Titusville Morning Herald

very great man; but he was strong enough as a third Presidential candidate in 1856 to cut out General Fremont and to elect Buchanan.

In the chapter of accidents which have decided so many of our Presidential elections, there are many possibilities against the administration. Sumner may be one of them. He seems to be in the mood for a scrub race against General Grant, and Trumbull, and Fenton, and Schurz, and a host of other disaffected party leaders, are not far behind. Sumner, however, is the immediate danger; and what is to be done with him? He is dead against St. Domingo; he may spoil the work of the Joint High Commission on those Alabama Claims, and he may defeat the great Darien Canal scheme, if retained in his present position at head of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. The President has no faith in him, and he has no faith in the President. What, then, should be done? Mr. Sumner, if he will have it so, should be removed, as a simple act of justice toward the Executive Department—a co-ordinate branch of the treaty-making power—as far as possible harmony should be secured between the President and that particular member of the Senate who represents it on our international affairs. The difficulty is clear, and the remedy is simple, after all.

Finally, upon this direct issue between President and Senator, the Republican party of the Senate must stick to the President. Otherwise the whole organization becomes demoralized, and a scrub race for the succession is inevitable. How else can it be if the head of the party is snubbed and Sumner is supported as a mutineer? General Grant, educated as a soldier, is a disciplinarian even as a politician. So was General Jackson. In this very thing, if the Republicans might have the sense to understand it, General Grant has shown them that distinguishing quality of Old Hickory, which sets and which may be more than a match against all inside mutineers and all outside schemes and coalitions.
